Some Chanukah Laws and Customs

The Chanukah lights should be lit when the stars appear. If one did not light then, one may still light through the remainder of the night, provided that the members of the household are still awake.

For the half hour preceding the time when the lights are to be lit, one is forbidden to eat a "fixed" meal or to partake of anything intoxicating. When the prescribed time has arrived, even the study of Torah is prohibited until the Chanukah lights are lit. When the stars appear, the evening prayers are recited and is followed immediately by the lighting of the Chanukah lights. The lights should burn for at least half an hour; thus, when lighting, there should be sufficient oil for them to burn for that amount of time. Those who light at sunset must place sufficient oil for the lights to burn for at least fifty minutes – twenty minutes from sunset until the appearance of the stars and thirty minutes afterwards. There must be sufficient oil at the time of lighting to burn for the required time.

If the Chanukah lights were accidentally extinguished during the prescribed period, they should be relit without a blessing. As long as the Chanukah lights are burning no benefit may be derived from their light and they may not be moved from place to place. On Friday afternoon, the lighting of the Chanukah lights precedes the lighting of the Shabbat candles. One should be careful to use sufficient oil to ensure that they remain lit for at least half an hour after the appearance of the stars.

ABOUT THE TORAH READING

Artscroll Stone Chumash: Pages 198—221

1st Aliyah: Parshat Vayeishev begins with the story of Yosef and his dreams and how the other brothers hate Yosef for their father Yaakov's favoritism and for Yosef's dreams of family
